Organhaus Curatorial Research(Research Exhibition)

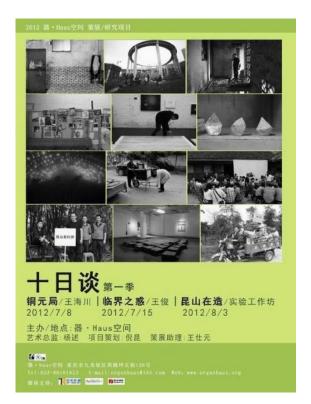

Decamerone

Duration: 2012-2014

The contemporary art in China are faced with the new radical changes. A bunch of new thought, along with new methods and new practices, are appearing in the scene of Chinese contemporary art. Based on the transforming "new art", this project is aim at developing a series of curating projects.

Organhaus Curatorial Research(Research Exhibition)

Decamerone

Duration: 2012-2014

Its theme is "the investigation of objects by artists through the concentrated format of solo exhibition". Intended for artists of around the age of 40, the project requires them to undertake the creative process using language as an entry point for discussion, and then make inquiries, document their activities, and finally present their research and exhibited outcomes in an interactive way.

Organhaus The Public Education Project

ORGANHAUS Residency Program

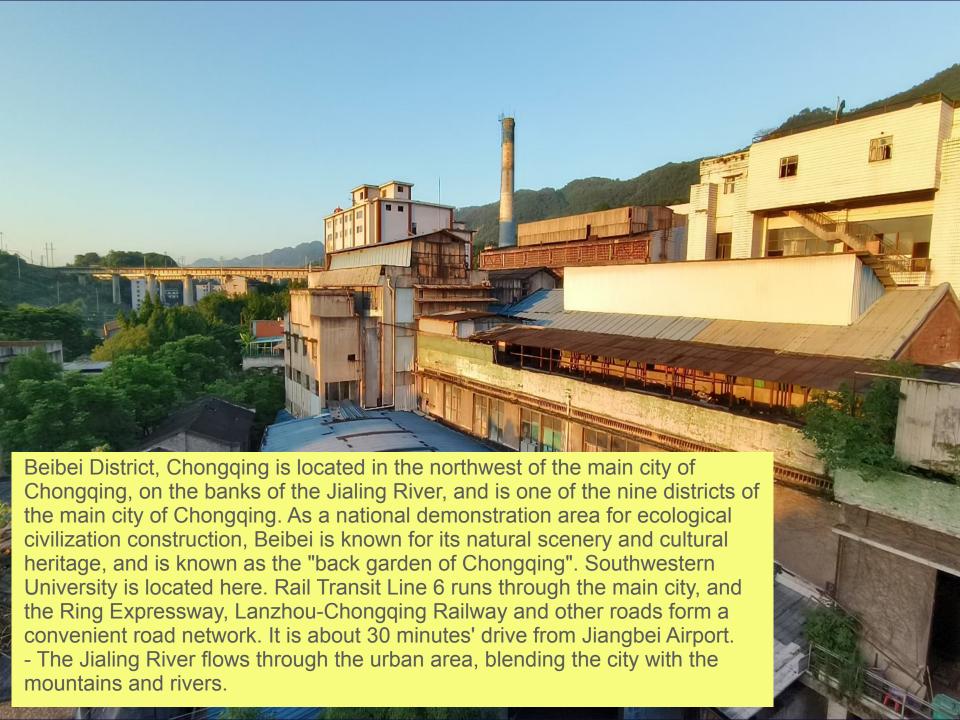

Organhaus is a non-profit art organisation run by artists and curators. It serves as a space where living and working together in the name and form of art weaves a thread circulaing and mediating the commons.

The space is committed to experimental and multimedia art, hosting various exhibitions, and providing studio space. It also facilitates studio exchanges and accepts applications for art exchanges and residencies from both domestic and international artists and organizations. Within the evolving context of China, Organhaus aims to contribute its energy and expertise to contemporary Chinese art, cutting-edge practices, and the development and exchange of international culture.

Founded by Yang Shu and Ni Kun in 2006, Organhaus was originally located at the Chongqing 501 Art Base until 2023, when it moved to the Beibei Beiyuan Glass Factory. It now encompasses nearly 200 square meters of studio and exhibition space, along with accommodation for residency programs.
